

KSU Futures program set to launch

High School Seniors invited to March 11 Open House

The new KSU Futures program will kick off Thursday, March 11 at KSU Center as the Continuing Education division hosts high school seniors, their parents and educators for a Futures Open House from 6 to 8:30 p.m. The program is designed to offer non-college bound graduating seniors career training options within the university.

Thirty-six certificate training programs have been identified as possible courses for young adults looking for direct career training. The Paralegal, Kennesaw Internet Professional, Technical Writing, Meeting and Event Planning, Administrative Professional and Culinary Fast Track Apprenticeship Certificate Program are all options for students through the Futures program. Other programs include Certified Nursing Assistant, EKG Technician, Phlebotomy, Medical Office Assistant and Personal Trainer.

"We know that college is not a perfect fit for everyone, so we want to offer another route to career success," said Kim Groves, director of marketing and program development for Continuing Education at Kennesaw State University. She added, "Our programs make sense for someone who wants to train for several months, rather than several years, SAT/ACT test scores or transcripts and are not required to go through the regular university admission process.

High school counselors and graduation coaches in the north metro Atlanta area and beyond

"Our programs make sense for someone who wants to train for several months, rather than several years."

but they are still part of KSU."

Certificate programs focus only on studies that directly relate to the training field, with no core classes required. In addition, students training through the Futures program do not have to submit will be sent KSU Futures catalogs outlining all training programs and other important information in March, and most classes begin in the fall.

For information about the KSU Futures program, see the back cover of this catalog, visit www.kennesaw.edu/ConEd/Futures or call 770-423-6765.